The product, originally called "Lemon-limate Soda of lemon-label", was released two weeks before the 1929 Wall Street crash. [2] It contained lithium citrate, a state-of-the-art stabilizer drug, until 1948. [3] [4] It was one of several popular patent medicine products in the late nineteenth and early twentieth centuries. Its name was later added to "7 lithiate lemon soft drinks" before even shortening to "7 Up" in 1936. [5] There is a myth that the name 7 comes from the drink that has a pH more than 7. That would make it neutral or basic on the scale; however, this is not the case, since pH 7 Up is about 3.79, making it acid on the pH scale and similar to other such drinks. [6] [unreliable source?] The actual origin of the name is unclear [7] Although Britvic claims that the name comes from the seven main ingredients in the drink, [8] while others have claimed that the number was a coded reference to the lithium contained in the original recipe, which has an atomic mass about 7. [9] Britvic also states that the name is the result of the fact that 7 Up was ambushed in 7 ounce bottles (Coca-Cola and most of the other soft drinks were bottled in 6 ounce bottles). 7 Up was a private corporation owned by the original founding families until it was sold in 1978 to Philip Morris, who sold it in 1986 in two parts: the international division to PepsiCo [10] and the business of the United States to a group led by the Hicks & Haas investment firm. [11] In the United States, 7 Up merged with DR Pepper in 1988; Cadbury Schweppes bought the combined company in 1995. The Dr Pepper Snapple Group was split by Cadbury Schweppes in 2008; it merged with Keurig Green Mountain in 2018 to form Keurig Dr Pepper. Use of cold commonly consumed with 7 Up is also well known as a mixture for lime refreshment of alcoholic limit, the most popular version is seven and seven (Seagram's 7 Crown and 7 7 7 7 or a "CC and Seven" (whiskey of the Canadian club and 7 above). 7 Up It is also used in non-alcoholic blows. Fórmula 7 has been reformulated several times since its launch in 1929. In 2006, the version of the product sold in the US. UU. It was reformulated so that it could be marketed as "100% natural". This was eliminated by the Disconnect Calcium Question EDTA and replacing sodium citrate with potassium citrate to reduce the sodium content of the drink. [12] This reformulation does not contain fruit juice and, in the United States, it is sweetened with high-fructose Maâz syrup (HFC). The manufacturing process used in HFCS production has led some public health groups and defense to challenge the "natural" statements of advertising campaign. [13] In 2007, after the science center in the public interchange threatened, it was announced that 7 up ceased to be marketed as "100% natural". Instead, it is now promoted that it has "100% natural flavors." The controversy does not extend to other Paises, such as the United Kingdom, where HFCs are not generally used in food, including 7 Up. In 2011, 7 Up began trying the marketing of a fórmula, called 7 Up retro, using Azá[®]car instead of HFC. Container labels look the title, "made with Azá[®]Car Real". Variations 7 Exhibition of bottling at the DR Pepper Museum in Waco, Texas, United States, a jug of bottling flavor for 7 UP: The syrup concentrate lacks Azá[®]Car and is sold to franchisees to fill. 7 UP TEN: introduced in 2013, along with the "ten" variations for the majority of the main brands of Dr. Pepper/Seven-Up, this contains 10 heat. It is a mixture that uses high-fructose Maâz syrup along with Aspartamo and Acesulfame potassium to sweeten it. [14] Tropical 7 UP: This is an UP 7 UP with pion flavor/mango, introduced in 2014 for a limited time. 1102 1102 adaropmet al ne odicudortni. setnaroclude omoc CFH sol ed ragul ne ra[®]Aza le azilita 1102 ed n[®]Alcalumrof atse orter PU 7 .aveum s[®]Am acram anu noc: 5102 ne oserger nu omoc from El Aprendiz, packaged in 12-oz. cans features either the logo of the 1970 disco or the 1980 logo. It is also available in 12 ounce glass bottles with a label inspired by the original 7 Up logo.[15] 7 Up Zero Sugar: This diet soda was originally introduced in 1963 as Like[16][17] (not to be confused with 7 Up's Like Cola of the 1980s). However, it was suspended in 1969 because of the ban on the scilamate by the US government. After the reformulation, he was reintroduced as Diet 7 Up in 1970. [18] It was renamed Sugar Free 7 Up in 1973 and then back to Diet 7 Up in 1979. [19] Diet 7 It was reformulated and announced that it was sweetened with Splenda (sucralose); the formula has been cooled and listed these ingredients: carbonated filtered water, natural flavors, citric acid, potassium citrate, potassium benzoate, aspartame, potassium potassium potassium, EDTA calcium disodium.[20] [21] The 7 Up Company claims they changed back to aspartame because they conducted a national study that showed that people preferred taste with aspartame instead of with Splenda. The drink was marked as 7 Up Zero Sugar when it was introduced in 1987.[22] Cherry 7 Up: A variant of cherry flavor was introduced in 1987.[22] Cherry 7 Sabor, with these ingredients listed for the United States version: Carbonated water, high fructose corn syrup, citric acid, natural and artificial flavors, potassium benzoate, red 40. An ingredient known among natural and artificial flavors is apple juice. The version sold in the United States is pink and comes in a clear bottle, while the international version is colourless and currently comes in a pink bottle. He was renamed and reformulated as Cherry 7 Up Antioxidant in January 2009.
